

Adam W. Watson, CPA

215/419-5781 | awatson@bbdcpa.com

Adam Watson is BBD's co-managing partner and leads the firm's Not-For-Profit Group. Adam has dedicated his more than 25-year career to serving the accounting, audit and tax needs of not-for-profit organizations, and he truly understands the unique business challenges facing the industry.

Adam's superior client service as well as his significant expertise have been instrumental in aiding the continual expansion of BBD's Not-For-Profit Group.

As an industry expert, Adam has extensive experience with and a deep understanding of the accounting, audit and tax needs of organizations in every niche in the not-for-profit sector, including:

- Cultural organizations, such as museums
- Social services organizations
- Educational organizations, such as independent schools and literacy-driven organizations
- Private foundations
- Professional and trade associations
- Religious institutions, such as churches, dioceses and sponsored works of religious orders

Adam regularly presents seminars to clients and other members of the not-for-profit community on the implications of accounting, auditing and tax pronouncements and other developments affecting not-for-profit organizations.

Adam is a licensed Certified Public Accountant in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland.

He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the New Jersey Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Adam served on the Board of Trustees of Benchmark School, a Delaware County-based independent school, for a decade. He served as Treasurer and led the Audit and Finance Committee and also sat on the Executive Committee of the School.

Adam received a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Maryland and a Bachelor of Science degree from Ursinus College.

